

Cookie Policy

This Cookie Policy explains why we use Cookies and other similar files (hereinafter referred to as Cookies) on this site.

1 What are Cookies

Cookies are small files that store information like images and pixels from the browser you are storing on your device. Cookies store the online activities of the user and can be used for statistics. Within these Cookies there are first party Cookies (sent to our site) and third party Cookies (sent to services our site uses) that store information.

The back and forth relay of information stored in Cookies allows us to confirm if a user has visited our site. We use Cookies to further tailor our site to the interests of its users.

Cookies are used to monitor the activities of users who visit our site in order to make the site better. There is no information that can be used to identify any individual person within Cookies. In cases where the customer agrees to and only if there is an operational need, we may save data that is related to personal information.

2 Agree to the Cookie policy

Agreeing to the Cookie policy is not necessary to use our site and they will only be used if the user agrees to the policy. Continuing to browse this site means you agree to the Cookie policy.

The user can edit the Cookie settings used on this site at any time. For example, you can make settings to refuse a particular type of cookie.

Cookie management can generally be accessed through your browser settings. Information for accessing the settings in your browser can be found at the bottom of this policy.

3 Intended use of Cookies

(1) Understand use conditions of the site, improvement of our services

The site usage information collected through Cookies may be analyzed and used to improve our website and the services we provide to the customers. For these purposes, our site mainly uses the following tools.

■Google Analytics

Publisher: Google Inc.

Google Analytics Terms of Use <https://www.google.com/analytics/terms/>
